

11.2.1 Overview of Disability Compensation Payment Instalments and Effective Dates

Instalments and dates of effect for pensions and allowances

Disability compensation payment is paid fortnightly in arrears. An instalment is payable in respect of the number of days in each fourteen day pension period for which the person is eligible to receive payment. In contrast, some Veterans' Compensation allowances are paid with respect to a relevant period, or as a lump sum. New claims for disability compensation payment and war widow's/widower's pension generally take effect three months before receipt of the claim at a DVA office. Increases in disability compensation payment already in payment take effect from the day the application for increase is received at a DVA office.

Payment on death of disability compensation payment recipient

VEA →

Section 121\(4\) VEA

VEA → \(go back\)

There is no entitlement to payment of disability compensation payment (including War Widow/er's Pension) for the pension period in which the disability compensation payment recipient dies. The disability compensation payment recipient must be alive for the whole pension period to be eligible for payment on the following pension payday, that is, the pension payday which follows 2 days later. This is because that is the payday to which the pension period relates. Where the death occurs between the end of the pension period and the corresponding pension payday, there is entitlement to payment on that payday as the death has occurred in the following pension period.

Dates of effect of determinations resulting from reviews

Determinations in respect to grants, variations, suspensions or cancellations of pensions or allowances can be made at the Commission (section 31), VRB, and AAT levels of review. Dates of effect for these determinations depend on the circumstances of the case and the nature of the review.

11.2.2 Instalments and Dates of Effect for Payments, Pensions and Allowances

Instalments of disability compensation payment and war widow's/widower's pension

Disability compensation payments and war widow's/widower's pensions are paid fortnightly in arrears. An instalment is payable in respect of the number of days in each fourteen day pension period for which the person is eligible and the pension is payable. (There is however no DCP/WWP entitlement in the payment/pension period in which the disability compensation payment recipient or war widow/er pensioner dies).

Section 11.2.1

More → \(go back\)

The instalment for the pension period will be payable on the next pension payday after the end of the pension. Variations to payments, pensions or allowances begin affecting the rate of payment from the day the determination is made. In the case of an application for increase in pension, the date of effect would normally be the date the application is received at an office of the Department in Australia.

In the case of a reduction the date of effect specified would normally be the first day of the pension period.

Daily entitlement

Daily entitlement is the amount of pension that is payable on a given day. This method of calculating pension instalments means that the pension for each payday will be made up of an amount for each day of the fourteen day pension period. The rate of pension payable to a person for a day is calculated by dividing the fortnightly rate of pension by 14. A system of daily entitlement will mean that:

- an instalment of pension can be made up of one or more pension rates, and
- pension variations may be effective from any day in the fortnight.

Allowances included in daily entitlement

Decoration allowance, clothing allowance, attendant allowance and recreation transport allowance are also paid fortnightly in arrears and on a system of daily entitlements.

Exception

Victoria cross allowance, loss of earnings allowance, temporary incapacity allowance and VCES payments are not paid using daily entitlements.
